

Chaplain's Corner

Finding Father Loy

By Staff Sgt. Tinna Taylor
152nd Airlift Wing Chapel

Not long after I'd joined the 152nd Airlift Wing as a Chaplain Assistant in September 2015, I noticed that, although I knew the local area had a large Catholic population, there were no Catholic services available. My mom mentioned that I had a distant cousin who was a priest in California who was about to celebrate his 25th anniversary as a Catholic priest in October. Although my cousin's parish assignment didn't allow him to come to Reno, all hope was not lost. A chaplain friend of mind suggested that I contact my cousin's co-worker at Renown Hospital, Father Lorenzo Torrente, also referred to as Father Loy. I spoke with Fr. Loy, and he expressed an interest in serving the troops. He said that he served as a chaplain in the Philippine Army and made it to the rank of Major. He currently works at the VA hospital as well as in Reno. We were able to bring him on board

Change of Command

'Bittersweet': Outgoing commander embraces new journey

152nd Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Col. Karl Stark feels bittersweet and exhausted, but that's a good thing. "For any outgoing commander, when you get down to it, it's always bittersweet," said Stark, whose three-year tenure as the 152nd Airlift Wing commander comes to a close 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the Nevada Air National Guard Base fuel cell hangar in a ceremonial passing of command to Col. Eric Wade. "The bitter part is you're leaving something that you're extremely passionate about. The sweet part is, I believe, if you do this job correctly, you're probably pretty tired — as a matter of fact, you ought to be exhausted. That's the sweet part of holding the burden of command year after year, it's certainly very challenging. It becomes your life." During Stark's tenure as the unit's 22nd commander, the 152nd, known as the "High Rollers," received a prestigious firefighting mission, a C-130 fleet upgrade and passed its first federal inspection under the new U.S. Air Force inspection system. Perhaps the highlight was the acquisition of the U.S. Forest Service's Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System mission, or MAFFS. With MAFFS, the 152nd becomes one of four C-130 units nationwide fighting largescale, wildland firefighting missions. According to Stark, though, the accomplishments during his tenure were less about the new mission and aircraft and more about an evolution

Leadership Summit

152nd Airlift Wing holds first Leadership Summit

When Gen. Joseph Lengyel visited the Nevada Air National Guard Base in Reno on March 3, he did something he admitted was one of the most important things he does as chief of the National Guard — talk about the importance of leadership. "I think anytime I get the opportunity to come and participate in the development of our future leaders of the National Guard, it's probably one of the most important things I do," Lengyel said. "We fight wars. We defend the homeland. We build partnerships," Lengyel said. "That's my message, and I can't do any of that without the people here in the National Guard to do it. That's why the focus on leadership development, having people that are experts in warfight, homeland, developing partnerships and growing our people

The IG Corner

The Department of Defense Hotline

By Lt. Col. Shelly Assiff
152nd Airlift Wing Inspector General

Another avenue to use regarding IG related issues is the Department of Defense Hotline. The mission of the DoD Hotline is to provide a confidential, reliable means to report violations of law, rule or regulation, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, abuse of authority, and classified information leaks involving the DoD; as well as the detection and prevention of threats and danger to the public health and safety of the Department and our Nation. You may contact the DoD Hotline at any time. <http://www.dodig.mil/Hotline/index.html> The DoD Hotline received 20,402 contacts within the past year, and has processed over 375,000 since its inception. As a result of the initiation of DoD Hotline investigations, the Government has saved or recovered over $551.5 million. More importantly, many of the cases resulted in safer products and equipment for our military personnel and Defense Department employees.

Father Daughter Dance

By Fred Barton
152 Airlift Wing Family Programs

The Governor's office, and the Nevada National Guard Child & Youth sponsored a Father and Daughter dance at the Governor's mansion March 11. Eighty Nevada military members and daughters got dressed up in their finest outfits, and danced the night away at the Governor's mansion ballroom. Special thanks to the Governor staff for all the assistance in the great National Guard Event.
