A Soldier pays her final respects to First Sgt. Charleston Hartfield, 100th Quartermaster Company, 17th Special Troops Battalion, 17th Sustainment Brigade, after a memorial service held at the North Las Vegas Readiness Center on October 21, 2017. Soldiers praised Hartfield for his mentorship, leadership and friendship.

LAS VEGAS — Selfless service defined the life, career and death of First Sgt. Charleston Hartfield, who served with the 100th Quartermaster Company, 17th Special Troops Battalion, 17th Sustainment Brigade, and as a Las Vegas Metro police officer.

The Nevada National Guard, Metro and the community of Las Vegas joined together

152nd Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Members of 152nd Maintenance Group volunteered to be on the firing party for the 21 gun salute at the funeral service, which took place Friday, October 20 in Bridgeport, California. A Celebration of Life was held Saturday, October 21 at the Nevada Air National Guard Base's Fuel Cell Hangar for friends and family to pay tribute to Master Sgt. Hysell and show support for his wife and three young children. (Photo by Tech. Sgt. Emerson Marcus/Released.)

Master Sgt. Ryan Hysell, a dedicated family man and 152nd Maintenance Group mechanic with a keen knowledge of the inner-workings of C-130 aircraft, died October 9.

He was 35.

"When it came to C-130 maintenance, he was one of the smartest guys to ever come out of the 152nd Airlift Wing," said Master Sgt. Michael Faulkenberry, a fellow 152nd aircraft crew chief.

"Master Sgt. Ryan Hysell's passing this week was a tremendous loss to the maintenance group," Col. David Manson, 152nd Maintenance Group

First Person Account—Skydiving with the Golden Knights

Without hesitation I walked to the edge of the plane — toes dangling 10,000 feet above ground. All I could see were the fields, buildings and cars appearing the size of ants. Was I really doing this?

Only moments before, during this early October day in northern Nevada, I was with my family, on the ground, at the Minden-Tahoe Airport Aviation Roundup Air Show.

This was very different than the ground.

RENO, Nev. -- The Nevada Air National Guard's 192nd Airlift Squadron, based here in Reno, flew a mission shuttling food and supplies to Puerto Rico on Wednesday, October 18.

Hurricane Maria struck Puerto Rico in September, marring the tropical island, and left it without many of the basic necessities such as fresh water, power and a working airport.

The National Guard Bureau directed this humanitarian mission. Its purpose was to help Puerto Ricans recover from Hurricane Maria by

Message from the 152nd Airlift Wing Command Chief re: 152nd Communications Flight's JISCC ongoing support of Northern California wildfires

MESSAGE FROM CHIEF MARK PRIZINA: For the past two weeks, the 152nd Communications Flight, Nevada Air National Guard, using the Joint Incident Site Communications Capability system, or JISCC, has provided communications for the medical and support elements working the northern California wildfires.

152nd Airlift Wing Command Chief Master Sgt. Mark Prizina visited the Nevada Airmen last week and had this to say:

"I had the privilege to join up with the team Thursday to assess the damage and witness firsthand the amazing support that the JISCC and the highly skilled Airmen from our Communications Flight have provided to first responders and the California Army National Guard. To hear Capt. Greg Green, Communications Flight Commander, put it into perspective made me realize that the Nevada National Guard's capability in these desperate times makes all the difference to the citizens in these communities devastated by natural disasters. The Nevada Air Guardsmen helped the Red Cross in a variety of ways: established internet, telephone and fax connectivity; provided laptops as well as aided the California Army National Guard with similar communications. I'm extremely impressed by the work they are doing in California."
