Recreational Companionship

By Maj. Donny Crandell
152nd Airlift Wing Chaplain

marriage minute

Among the five basic male needs, spending recreational time with his wife is ranked second only to sex for the typical husband. So when a wife announces after marriage that she's no longer interested in joining him in his favorite activities and that he should enjoy them with his friends instead, it usually comes as a shock. It also eliminates one of the most important ways that she makes Love Bank deposits.

So, if you have lost interest in the recreational activities that you enjoyed while dating, maybe it's time to create some new ones to enjoy together.

CARSON CITY - A Douglas County back-country skier received a lifesaving lift from a Nevada Army Guard Black Hawk helicopter crew Feb. 14 after being injured in an avalanche.

According to the East Fork Fire Protection District and Army Aviation Support Facility Soldiers, a Nevada Army Guard UH-60 Black Hawk crew was dispatched to Job's Peak near Minden, Nev., late in the afternoon Tuesday to carry a skier with a broken leg to safety.

The Nevada Army Guard was called to assist in the rescue after Douglas County and Alpine County rescue crews could not evacuate the skier due to steep terrain and deep snow.

The Nevada Army Guard Black Hawk crew overcame low visibility and turbulence to evacuate the patient safely to an awaiting ambulance. The skier was successfully extracted with the use of a compact stretcher system (SKED) and was hoisted about 130 feet into the awaiting helicopter for transport to medical care.

RENO, Nev. — Lt. Col. Tom Funk assumed command of the 152nd Maintenance Group here Feb. 10 with a brief lesson on the origin of the word "maintain," meaning "in the hand," and further breaking it down into, "to keep." He explained to his troops why that was important — to keep or maintain in the hand.

"During my time, we will maintain our fleet, we will maintain our professionalism, we will maintain our candor," Funk said during his assumption of command ceremony at the Nevada Air National Guard Base's wing auditorium. "We'll make sure we are being honest and open with each other, but the one thing we will not maintain is the status quo."

Presiding official, Col. Eric Wade, 152nd Airlift Wing commander, opened the ceremony recognizing Funk's accomplishments.

"It was easy decision to put Tom in the Maintenance Group commander position because of his wealth of experience and his knowl-

Washington, D.C. - Army Brig. Gen. Janeen Birkhead, the Maryland National Guard's assistant adjutant general for Army, illustrates a point to high school and college students during a mentoring session that was part of the annual Black Engineer of the Year Awards, Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics, Global Competitiveness Conference, held recently in Washington, D.C. Birkhead highlighted to the students how STEM can be a viable career option for them, as well as discussing how it's part of their day-to-day lives. (Photo By: Tech. Sgt. Erich B. Smith, Released)

ARLINGTON, Va. - Leaders from throughout the National Guard joined other Service members in mentoring more than 400 high school and college students during the annual Black Engineer of the Year Awards, Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics, Global Competitiveness Conference, held recently in Washington, D.C.

The event allowed students to gain insight from Guard leaders, many of whom have STEM backgrounds.

"STEM is important," said Army Brig. Gen. Janeen Birkhead, the Maryland National Guard's assistant adjutant general for Army. "It involves almost everything that we do in life, whether it is work, home or play."

For many mentors, it was an opportunity to pass on life lessons and encourage young minds.

"I shared with them my successes and failures, and passed on things that worked well for me and what might work well for them," said Air Force Brig. Gen. Shanna Woyak, the Air National Guard assistant to the chief of the Air Force Nurse Corps.
