High Rollers participate in joint exercise with U.S. Navy and Nevada Army National Guard

By Senior Airman Baylee Hunt 152nd Airlift Wing Public Affairs

An Air National Guardsman from the 192nd Airlift Squadron watches as a Nevada Air National Guard C-130 flies over the Naval Air Station Fallon Range Training Complex during the Resolute Hunter Exercise, a joint exercise with the United States Navy, Nevada Air National Guard and Nevada Army National Guard on April 25, 2019.

RENO, Nev. (April 26, 2019) – Aircrew and two C-130s from the 152nd Airlift Wing's 192nd Airlift Squadron (192AS) and 152nd Operations Support Squadron in Reno, Nev. provided support to the Naval Aviation Warfighting Development Center (NAWDC) in Fallon Nev. by participating in Exercise Resolute Hunter April 25 to 26 at the Naval Air Station Fallon Range Training Complex (FRTC).

Capt. Kyle Carraher, a pilot from the 192nd AS, said, "The 152nd Operations Group had the opportunity to test and hone our skills against enemy threat systems, practice aggressive low level flying, and receive critical feedback, in real time, on our performance." The 192nd AS air-

High Rollers participate in aerial firefighting training with U.S. Forest Service in Colorado

Members of the Nevada Air National Guard's 152nd Airlift Wing arrive at Peterson Air Force Base in Colorado Springs, Colorado on Sunday, May 5, 2019. The 152nd Airlift Wing is one of three military C-130 Hercules units participating this week in the annual Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System Training, or MAFFS, training with the U.S. Forest Service.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (May 10, 2019) -- Wildland firefighting includes a multi-faceted approach with many governmental agencies coming together as one—including the U.S. military.

Since 1974, the U.S. Forest Service and Department of Defense have operated under a joint program using the Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System, more commonly known as MAFFS, which rolls into
